

BOSTON (Mass.)
RECORD

Approved For Release 2004/12/15 : CIA-RDP75-00149R000700470035-9

Circ.: m. 373,012

Front Edit Other
Page Page Page

Date: JUL 3 1961

Revised TAYLOR
x ag & Taylor

Taylor's Job

WHILE THERE ARE MISGIVINGS in the Pentagon about the precise authority of General Maxwell D. Taylor, newly appointed Presidential military advisor, they do not appear to be shared by the chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff.

News stories attribute "sources close to" General Lyman L. Lemnitzer as saying he regards the Taylor appointment to be supplementary to, rather than infringing on, the powers of the JCS. Let's hope it works out that way. One thing we can well do without is sub-surface antagonisms among our military minds.

Certainly Mr. Kennedy could not have summoned from retirement a more informed military advisor, or one with a more incisive intelligence.

General Taylor's service as commander of our Berlin garrison in 1949 and '50—immediately after the airlift—will be valuable in counseling the President on an effective military posture to meet developing crisis there. As head of a special committee, he has already been assessing the functioning of the Central Intelligence Agency in the Cuban debacle, which points to its future value in that area.

It is further evidence of General Taylor's patriotism that he has relinquished a responsible position in private life, as President of the Lincoln Center for the Performing Arts, in New York, to answer the President's summons.

This also appeared in the
Los Angeles Examiner, 6 July 1961.

BOSTON (Mass.)

JUL 3 1961

RECORDED Approved For Release 2004/12/15 : CIA-RDP75-00149R000700470035-9

Circ.: m. 373,012

Pers 2-MD TAYLOR
x ag & Taylor

Front Page Edit Page Other Page

Date:

JUL 3 1961

Taylor's Job

WHILE THERE ARE MISGIVINGS in the Pentagon about the precise authority of General Maxwell D. Taylor, newly appointed Presidential military advisor, they do not appear to be shared by the chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff.

News stories attribute "sources close to" General Lyman L. Lemnitzer as saying he regards the Taylor appointment to be supplementary to, rather than infringing on, the powers of the JCS. Let's hope it works out that way. One thing we can well do without is sub-surface antagonisms among our military minds.

Certainly Mr. Kennedy could not have summoned from retirement a more informed military advisor, or one with a more incisive intelligence.

General Taylor's service as commander of our Berlin garrison in 1949 and '50—immediately after the airlift—will be valuable in counselling the President on an effective military posture to meet developing crisis there. As head of a special committee, he has already been assessing the functioning of the Central Intelligence Agency in the Cuban debacle, which points to his future value in that area.

It is further evidence of General Taylor's patriotism that he has relinquished a responsible position in private life, as President of the Lincoln Center for the Performing Arts, in New York, to answer the President's summons.

This also appeared in the Los Angeles Examiner, 6 July 1961.